Dear Sirs,

Eden Europe is a leading European manufacturer of shelving system for major retailers. One of our key manufacturing processes is powder coating of the individual steel (mainly sheet metal) components.

Our powder coating line consists of several parts: pre-treatment section, dry-off oven, powder-coating booth, curing oven and cooling section.

During the curing process of the powders, the curing oven generates fumes which are extracted from the production line through a ducting system to the roof of our building.

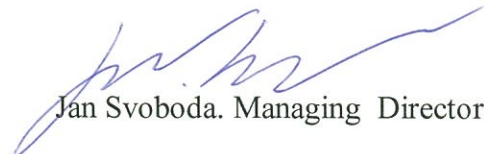

As our factory is located very close to residential areas, we have experienced a series of complaints from local inhabitants about unpleasant odors coming out from our ducting.

Despite the fact that the fumes are not hazardous to human health or environment we started a project of odor elimination.

During our efforts we contacted REGITAS for their support and expertise.

In November 2014, we made a test with SMELLMEISTER installation and we found that there was a considerable reduction of odors. Based on the successful test results we installed SMELLMEISTER device in June 2015. Ever since the installation was done, the number of complaints dramatically dropped.

Kind regards

Jan Svoboda. Managing Director
